Question III

Instructions: For questions 1 – 20, fill in the blanks with the correct tense. The verbs are given in the parentheses.

Shinzo Abe to Become First Japanese Leader to Visit Pearl Harbour

Japan Prime Minister Shinzo Abe (say) said (0) on Monday that he would visit Pearl Harbour, becoming the first sitting Japanese leader to go to the site of Japan's attack 75 years ago that pulled a stunned United States into World War II. He will travel to the American naval base with President Obama during a trip to Hawaii on Dec. 26 and 27.

By visiting Pearl Harbour, Mr. Abe (reciprocate) _____ (1) a historic trip Mr. Obama made in May to Hiroshima, where the United States dropped a nuclear bomb at the end of the war with Japan in 1945. No sitting American president (visit) _____ (2) the city previously. "We must never repeat the horror of war," Mr. Abe said on Monday. "I (want) _____ (3) to express that determination as we look to the future, and at the same time send a message about the value of U.S. – Japanese reconciliation."

Mr. Abe's visit will come just a few weeks after the 75th anniversary of the attack, which (occur) _____ (4) on Dec. 7, 1941. Carried out by Japanese bombers and fighter planes launched from aircraft carriers that had quietly slipped within striking distance of Hawaii, the attack (kill) _____ (5) more than 2,000 Americans and sank a number of United States warships, including the battleship Arizona, whose wreck has become a memorial to the battle.

Politicians there still pay homage to the "heroes" of Pearl Harbour — meaning the Japanese aviators and others who (die) _____ (6) in the attack. There is a museum exhibit in their honour at Etajima, an island off Hiroshima, that once served as the Imperial Japanese Naval Academy, a Japanese equivalent of the United States Navy's training academy at Annapolis. For decades, politicians (be) _____ (7) reluctant to make any statement resembling an apology for the attack, which many in Japan argue was the natural outgrowth of an American-led oil embargo that would have starved the Japanese empire.

Back in August, Mr. Abe's wife, Akie, (pay) _____ (8) a quiet visit to Pearl Harbour and the Arizona memorial, fuelling speculation that her husband would follow, although Japanese officials (maintain) _____ (9) that there was no plan for him to do so. Mr. Abe did not elaborate on Monday on his plans for the Pearl Harbour visit, which will be carefully choreographed with American officials. He said he (hope) _____ (10) to "comfort the souls of the victims." Several American veteran groups said they welcomed Mr. Abe's visit, regardless of whether he apologizes or not.

Google Is Going All in on Renewable Energy

Google expects to purchase enough renewable energy to cover its entire operation for the first time ever next year, the company (announce) announced (0) last Tuesday. Beginning next year, the company (purchase) _____ (11) about 2.6 gigawatts of wind and solar energy annually (enough to more power more than 1 million homes) to power its office and data centre operations around the globe. The nature of the electric grid means the company cannot ensure that its facilities only use renewable energy, but the company (contract) _____ (12) with renewable producers to add wind and solar capacity to the grid. This (mean) _____ (13) that Google's consumption does not result in any increase in electricity use from fossil fuels.

Google's announcement is the latest indicator of how quickly renewable energy sources (become) _____ (14) a competitive alternative to fossil fuels. The cost of solar power per unit of electricity, for instance, is now 1/150th of what it (be) _____ (15) in the 1970s and costs the same as electricity produced from coal and natural gas fired plants in many places, according to a Bloomberg report. Gary Demasi, the company's director of global infrastructure and energy, (say) _____ (16) that when the company's executives first set a 100% renewable target in 2012 they had no idea how quickly they could achieve it. "The cost curve (come) _____ (17) down regardless," he says. "We didn't know it would come down so quickly."

Google, whose data centres across the globe consume large quantities of energy, (explain) _____ (18) the choice to go renewable as a business decision first and foremost. Contracts to purchase renewable energy help the company avoid the highly-variable costs of fossil fuels that affect the bottom line of other energy-intensive industries.

Beyond business concerns, meeting the renewable target will also delight environmental groups that (call) _____ (19) on corporations to help make up the gap between government commitments to reduce carbon dioxide emissions and the level scientists say is needed to address climate change. Since then, more than 80 large companies including the likes of Facebook, Nestle and Walmart have promised to go 100% renewable in the coming years. Data from the Climate Group, which organizes a coalition of companies pursuing 100% renewable energy, (suggest) _____ (20) that if all companies made such a pledge global carbon dioxide emissions would fall by as much as 15%.

SECTION B: SUBJECT-VERB AGREEMENT [20 MARKS]Question I

Instructions: The following extract contains 11 errors in subject-verb agreement. Identify 10 errors and correct them as shown in the example. The first error is stated as the example.

EXAMPLE:	No	Line	Error	Correction
	0	3	suffer	suffers

Hashimoto's Disease—Here's What You Need to Know

Gigi Hadid made a surprising revelation this week. Despite working out like a boss and doing her best to eat healthily, she has dealt with her fair share of metabolism struggles. That is because she suffer from Hashimoto's disease, and this disease is an autoimmune condition that cause thyroid damage.

- 5 "My metabolism actually changed like crazy this year," Gigi revealed at Reebok's Perfect Never event in New York City, according to People. "I have Hashimoto's disease. It is a thyroid disease, and it have now been two years since I started taking the medication for it."

- 10 According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Hashimoto's disease is about seven times more common in women than in men. People who are diagnosed with this disease typically has family members with thyroid or other autoimmune diseases. It can occur in teens and young women, but it show up more commonly in middle-aged women, the organization says. Having that said, Gina Rodriguez and Victoria Justice has also said they suffer from the 15 condition.

- "A person develops Hashimoto's disease when his or her body creates antibodies that fights against the thyroid gland," says Melanie Goldfarb, M.D., an endocrine surgeon and director of the endocrine tumour program at John Wayne Cancer Institute at Providence Saint John's Health Centre in Santa Monica, Calif.
20 "People may not even notice the symptoms—which includes constipation, feeling cold and rundown, and having difficulty concentrating—at first, as they're not super obvious," says Goldfarb. "Eventually, though, your thyroid won't function as well as it could, and as a result you'll likely start noticing some seemingly unexplainable weight gain," she says.
25 "That often brings people into the doctor's office, where diagnosis happens through a blood test that measure the levels of the thyroid hormone and thyroid-stimulating hormone (TSH) in your body," says Supneet Saluja, M.D., an endocrinologist at Baltimore's Mercy Medical Hospital.

Continued...

Sometimes, doctors take a wait-and-see-approach with Hashimoto's disease. "Having the condition itself don't necessarily mean that you're going to have symptoms or that your thyroid is not working," Goldfarb explains. Doctors will typically give patients a blood test each year to check their thyroid hormone levels and, if they start to drop, they'll prescribe medication like levothyroxine to help them re-stabilize.

And yes, experts says it is totally plausible to have Hashimoto's disease and still be healthy. "Once your body is producing the right amount of thyroid hormone, everything should be back to normal," says Saluja. In addition, any weight gain that occurred because hormone levels were out of whack should drop off once they are back in proper working order.
